

Collection of English Drinking Glasses Emerge in Virginia

Jeffrey S Evans' spring sale of 18th and 19th century glassware and lighting takes place in Mount Crawford, Virginia. It includes a collection of more than 100 18th and 19th century English drinking glasses, to be offered unreserved on May 20.

English trumpet bowled glass set on a Newcastle light baluster stem with an acorn knob estimated at $300-500 at Jeffrey S Evans on May 20.

The collection was formed by Lynne and the late Philip Blaker of Austin, Texas, and many of the pieces were purchased during trips to England in the 1980s-90s. It features a variety of different forms including opaque- and air twist-, balustroid- and facet-stemmed examples.

Five English 18th century opaque-twist glasses estimated at $100-400 apiece at Jeffrey S Evans on May 20.

Five 18th century opaque-twist glasses from the collection, two with engraved decoration to the bowls, are estimated at $100-400 apiece.

Also shown here is a single 7in (18cm) high trumpet bowled glass set on a Newcastle light baluster stem with an acorn knob which has an estimate of $300-500.

The auction house points out that because of the ongoing Covid-19 crisis this auction will probably be held with remote bidding only. An official announcement will be made early this month.